ABSTRACT

In recent years, with the appearance of social media, traditional print and broadcast media as main promotional tools have faced major challenges, as many newspapers and television channels have suffered audience reduction. Overwhelmingly, the majority of marketers, both business and political, have started to use some form of social media for promotional purposes. The overall purpose of this research is to characterize the similarities and differences of the use of social media as promotional tool by political parties and companies. This research is exploratory in nature and the data collected is qualitative. In order to conduct this research, we have interviewed two political parties and two companies. Taking into account the new communication paradigm from Man gold and Faulds as a base, we asked questions about how they use each element of the promotional mix in social media. The findings showed that the use of social media for promotional purposes was rather similar between the companies and political parties. Analyzed data showed that political parties, in their social media activities, were focused on public relations and personal selling in a form of online interactions with voters, while the companies only focused on public relations. This research demonstrates that both political parties and companies still have not fully integrated social media for promotional purposes and that they still rely on traditional media for promotion.

Measure the impact of marketing activities on decisions to visit the platform and on decisions to create and buy content. The model explains individual-level choices as a function of consumer characteristics and marketing activities, allowing for interdependence of decisions within and across users. Our results compare four types of marketing activities: price promotions, firm online activities, content creator referrals, and public relations efforts. We show that price promotions have strong effects on purchases, while content creator referrals and public relations have significant effects on all user decisions.

An interesting feature of the data is that the price distribution in the absence of promotional activities first order stochastically dominates that under display or feature advertising. The theoretical model we introduce can yield an equilibrium that is consistent with the above observations

1. INTRODUCTION

"As we spread wings to expand our capabilities and explore new horizons, the fundamental focus remains unchanged: seek out the best technology in the world and put it at the service of our ultimate user: our customer."

Promotion is true that products are manufactured to satisfy the needs of the consumers.. But alone is not enough. Today the responsibility of the manufacturers does not cease with physical production whatever may be the nature of the product. The present day marketers are consumer oriented where it is the duty of the manufacturers to know from where, when, how and what price the products would be available. Successful marketing consists in offering the right product of the right price of the right place (and time) with right promotion.

In course of time, various activities came into vogue designed particularly to help easy sale of goods. These activities commonly known as promotional Mix. The marketing communication Mix also called as the "Promotion Mix" consists of four major tools.

1. Advertising.
- 2. Sales Promotion
3. Publicity
4. Personal Selling

Generally marketing communication is undertaken to pass on the message of a product or sale to the ultimate consumers. Thus, there are three elements in this process.

The purpose of advertising is motivating but to sell something a product or service, the real objective of advertising is effective communication between producers and consumers. In other words the ultimate purpose all advertising is "Increased awareness" list of the following specific objectives of advertising.

The process of selling is ensured by personal selling supposed by advertising and sales promotion. Of these three methods personal selling occupies the predominant role mainly because of the personal element involves. It may be described as a personal source rendered to the community in connection with marketing of goods.

It is a marketing process with which consumers are personally persuaded to by goods and services offered by a manufacturer. The most powerful element in the promotional mix is salesman ship, is not something very new. Even centuries ago salesman ship was practiced in Greece and Rome. According to Peter Drucker Cyrus Mecornie was the first man to use modern technique of selling.

Features:

1. It helps to establish a cordial and abiding relationship between the organization and its customers.
2. It is a creative art. It creates wants a new.
3. It is a science, in the sense that "One human mind influences another human mind".
4. Personal selling imparts knowledge and technical assistance to the consumers.

Promotion includes all those functions, which have to do with the marketing of a product all other activities designed to increase and expand the market. But it is clearly distinguished from advertising and personal selling, through basic aim or all the three is one and the same viz., to increase the volume of sales.

"Sales promotion in a specific sense refers to those sales activities that supplement both personal selling and advertising and co-ordination ate them and help to make them effective, such as displays, shows and expositions, demonstrations and other non recurrent selling efforts not in the ordinary routine".

Evaluation of Sales Promotion:

Two decades ago, there was no agreement among the marketing people that there was a separate sales promotion function. In those days, promotion was a "share- run to gain a short run good".

The importance of sales promotion is modern marketing has increased mainly an account of its ability in promoting sales and preparing the ground for future expansion. The main objective of sales promotion is to attract the prospective buyer towards the product.

PUBLICITY

The publicity is derived as “Any form of commercially significant news about a product, and institution, a service, or a person published in a space or radio i.e. not paid for by the sponsor”. In short advertisement is paid form of publicity. It is to be noted here that though the terms ‘ADVERTISING’ ‘AND’ ‘Publicity’ or differences in the field of marketing, both are used interchangeably.

The media are broadly classified into direct indirect. Direct method of advertising refers to such methods used by the advertiser with which he could establish a direct contact with the prospects. Most of the media are indirect in nature EX: Free Publicity, cinema, etc.
